03. EQUIPMENT SPECIFICATIONS

Motorola #HT750 or equal: Portable radios, hand-held, multi-channel (minimum 4) with four watts of transmitting and receiving power to insure one mile minimum range in open field conditions. Units shall be available with lapel type microphones, security earpieces and/or headsets, in adequate quantities for the unit rented, and must all be programmed to the same frequency. In some cases, a repeater may be necessary.

Handheld -- Handholds have a range of about one mile depending on the terrain. Mobile and base station ranges increase to between five and 10 miles depending on terrain. In order to increase these unit-to-unit ranges, users incorporate the use of a local repeater into their system.

Repeater -- Repeaters are strategically located in every community to give the greatest coverage possible. Repeaters receive a radio signal and immediately retransmit that signal. Since the repeater has a much higher output power and is usually located at a higher elevation, the repeater is an excellent way to extend the coverage range of a mobile or handheld.

Talk around -- Frequency in a radio, which allows users to avoid using the repeater, especially when they are at the same location within one mile of each other. The frequency allows you to "talk around" the repeater, which is the same as operating on a simplex frequency.

Range Required -- Our normal usage is for on-site radios, however there are times that we will need the use of wide-area radios.

On-site -- Normally referring to radio communication within a single facility like a building or within the grounds of an outdoor event like a graduation ceremony. A one-mile range is expected depending on terrain. The more clear and open the area the better the range. Any underground (basement, tunnel, parking levels, etc.) coverage may require additional equipment.

Wide Area -- Normally referring to a wider area than On-site, for example; across town or across a larger campus setting.

04. POWER

The power rating for a radio is measured in watts. The higher the watts the stronger the signal strength. The higher the wattage, the shorter the battery life for hand held. If you need to use a VHF or UHF repeater, it is recommended to use at least 4 watts of power. This chart will help in determine the power you need.

For Simplex Hand Held Radios

Power Rating	Ideal Case Distance in Miles	Realistic Distance in Miles
.5 Watts	Two	Up to Half
1 Watt	Three	One
2 watts	Four	One and a Half
4/5 watts	Five	Two

Mobile and Base Station radios usually have power ratings from under 10 watts to 110 Watts or more. Your FCC Frequency License will indicate maximum power allowed (or effective radiated power). It is advisable to request a FCC license for a particular power output and frequency as part of the process of renting radio equipment.

05. RENTAL PERIOD

The rental term shall be defined as that period for which the rented instrument is actually in use. The City will define the delivery date for which the equipment shall be provided. The pickup date will also be detailed indicating that date when equipment will no longer be required and the radios will be available for removal. These dates WILL NOT DETERMINE THE RENTAL TERM. The rental and billing term will be defined as that period for which the equipment will actually be used during an event or festival.

Under normal conditions, the delivery of equipment will usually be requested two days prior to the initial use of this equipment. The pickup date will usually be two days after equipment is no longer required. All rental equipment will be verified upon delivery by designated staff and signed for by both parties. Equipment is not to be delivered to an unauthorized party or dropped off without proper signatures. Pick-up of all equipment will be verified by both parties and signed off together. Any discrepancies will be addressed in writing by the appropriate party.

When the Contractor cannot arrange a pickup of rented equipment after completion of its use due to a holiday or weekend, the Contractor may not invoice the City for this extra time due to their inability to arrange a pickup of rented equipment.

The successful Contractor and City representative shall determine the rental term (number of days) applicable for each requirement, in advance of the delivery of such equipment.

06. ALTERNATE RENTAL PERIOD

The City may or may not choose to rent some radios and accompanying equipment (chargers, lapel mics, headsets, clips and extra batteries) on a weekly or monthly basis. Charges would be made on a per week or per month per radio basis instead of for actual use. Per week and per month charges should include cost of all items required by specifications.
